OUR RARE & VINTAGE BOURBONS

There are not many “Bottle in Bond” bourbons produced today. They made up the bulk of what was sold before Prohibition. It was “the good stuff” because you were guaranteed that the bourbon was a good age and a good strong honest proof, and you knew it came from one distillery

JEFFERSON'S

WOOD EXPERIMENT COLLECTION

The inspiration behind Jefferson Bourbon Wood Experiment Collection came from Trey spending time in the wine cooperage in Missouri. Wine cooperage are different than what you find in Kentucky as they have different treating process, which focus more on toasting, slow cooking and searing to bring different flavors to the forefront. It was at this point that they asked "How could they change up what the final flavors of the bourbon are after they mature it in typical bourbon barrels? They started by putting 4 years old bourbon that had been aged in new charred oak barrels and finished in 13 different environments/vessels. There are so many combinations to experiment with-new bourbon barrels, new wine barrels, wine barrels heads on a new bourbon barrel, insert oak staves that have been seared or oak cubes that have been slow cooked, etc. Over a period of 32 months, they charted the characteristics of each experiment monthly and analyzed how the different treatments have affected the outcome of the final whiskey. They decided to bottle them up in five 200ml experiments so you can try five different experiments and see yourself how these small changes make a vast difference

SMALL BATCH

Blended from a very small number of exceptional casks Small Batch shares many of the characteristics of Single Barrel in terms of quality and depth of flavor. Small Batch whiskies show off the skills of the master blenders. For the creation of a small batch whisky, one must know which casks to pick to achieve the desired end result and then blend them to achieve the perfect balance of flavors, smoothness and power

BUFFALO TRACE / SINGLE OAK PROJECT

The Single Oak Project is the most extensive bourbon experiment ever undertaken. For over two centuries Buffalo Trace Distillery has been a pioneering leader in quality and innovation. The Single Oak Project is their most inventive and comprehensive experiment yet.

It all started with 96 individually selected American oak trees that differed according to the number of growth rings per inch and growing location. Each tree was then cut into two parts - top and bottom - yielding 192 unique tree sections. A single barrel was constructed from each unique section.

ORPHAN BARREL PROJECT

The Orphan Barrel Whiskey Company was started to share barrels of rare and delicious whiskey, hidden away and nearly forgotten in the back of rick houses and distilleries.

Stories of these lost whiskeys have become the stuff of legend. Every Orphan Barrel is hand bottled in Tullahoma, Tennessee, to ensure that these rare whiskeys are treated with the care they deserve – because some of them will only be available once. And once they're gone, they're gone forever

BUFFALO TRACE / EXPERIMENTAL COLLECTION

Buffalo Trace Distillery began experimenting with recipes and barrel treatments more than two decades ago.

Currently there are more than 2,000 experimental barrels of whiskey aging in its warehouses. Each of the barrels has unique characteristics and experimental changes in the mash bill, types of wood, barrel toasts and more. Periodically, an experimental whiskey is bottled and sold on a limited basis. The taste profile for each experiment is uniquely its own depending on the mash bill, wood type, barrel treatment, warehouse environment and age.

RYE WHISKEY

Rye Whiskey cannot be called Bourbon as the mash content is at least 51% rye rather than corn. A 'straight rye' is a rye whiskey that has been aged in new charred oak barrels for at least two years. Rye whisky lends itself well to prolonged ageing and is generally fuller and spicier than Bourbon.
